FORWARD
BY
H.E. HON. JOSEPH N. BOAKAI
VICE PRESIDENT OF LIBERIA & PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE

Liberia has gone through many upheavals during its 159 year history. But during the last 14 years we have systematically pushed our society to the brinks of annihilation and tested our resolve as a nation and people. However, I never stop being amazed by our uncanny ability to put the past behind us and triumphantly reawaken from our near comatose state.

The foundation blocks of Liberia's reconstruction have already be stacked and I believe with every fiber of my being that we are on our way to a dawn of a new era. And our foreign partners and friends are an integral component of this drive to build a new Liberia.

A profile of the 52nd Legislature could not have come at a more opportune time as the first branch of government settles down for business.

On January 19, 2006, I delivered this statement at the opening of the 52nd Legislature and I believe the issues raised are still germane to the reconstruction process of our country.

*Mr. President Pro-Temp
Esteemed & Honorable Ladies and Gentlemen of the Senate
Government Officials
Members of the Press
Distinguished Ladies and Gentlemen*

It is equally my pleasure and a pleasing duty to officially welcome you to this historic chamber of the Honorable, the Liberian Senate. As we gather here today, I cannot help but remember that on 51 different other somber occasions, our forefathers and senates before us have assembled under similar circumstances to begin to chart the course of our future.

Like all of you, those honorable men of women assembled with great eagerness and anticipation. Politicians - both opposition and comrades; farmers; lawyers; teachers; tradesmen & women; haves and have-nots; commoners and people from all walks of life, assembled for a cause that radiated throughout the chamber. Yes, from diverse background they traveled to reach Capitol Hill, but for a singleness of purpose they were galvanized. The freedom that we cherish now and the country that we so warmly embrace today, is a result of years of focused collaboration and union of great minds.

As the echo of my voice reverberates within this chamber, I also hear and feel the reverberations of past debates, many times heated and tense, but rocketed toward the common objective, the cause of our country. I am sure they stood firmly against anything that threatened the nation state.

And so, Honorable Ladies and Gentlemen of the Senate, as this 52nd Senate assemble to begin to discharge the functions for which we were elected, let us never forget that the cause of our country is the greater good. I therefore challenge all of you to continue to remain resolute and uncompromising on those issues that affect our country. However, may you never entertain the option to allow self-interests and personal agendas to transcend the common good of those who elected you and me.

The tasks ahead are mountainous and challenging. But I am ever confident that by the great eagerness and zeal that I see in your eyes none of the tasks ahead is insurmountable. I urge you to let dedication, commitment, respect, cordiality, discussion, consultation, and constructive engagement be the modus operandi of this the 52nd Senate.

I pledge my own commitment and the support of my office and staff to ensuring that we are constantly available to you.

Honorable Ladies and Gentlemen of the Senate, I today also bring you warm felicitations from Her Excellency, Madam Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf, the 23rd President of the Republic of Liberia. She sends her greetings and wishes us well in our deliberations. President Johnson-Sirleaf wants me to reecho her stated commitment to working with the Senate and the House to ensure not just that sound policies and programs are birthed out of this Legislature, but that we, together, remain focused on the task of national reconstruction.

Honorable ladies and Gentle of the Senate, I thank you and I now declare the 52nd Senate open for business.

My many thanks to the European Commission / Konrad Adenauer Foundation (KAF), Monrovia for producing and funding this document.

BACKGROUND:

On December 24, 1989, a small militia of less than a 100men crossed the border s of Liberia from Ivory Coast (now Côte d'Ivoire) and launched what would later become known as the “Popular Peoples Uprising” led by the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) under the leadership of Charles G. Taylor. A reign of terror showered Liberia for over six years leading to elections on the 19th July 1997. Barely a year after Taylor’s electoral victory during elections organized by the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), war broke out from neighboring Guinea in late 1998 lead by a group called the Liberians United for Reconstruction and Development (LURD). By 2002 LURD had gained tremendous grounds in the northwestern counties of Lofa, Gbarpolu and Bomi (including portions of central Bong County). By April 2003, Liberia had been swallowed up in full scale battle by both LURD and another rebel group calling itself Movement for Democracy in Liberia (MODEL). Invading from neighboring Côte d'Ivoire, MODEL seized Liberia’s entire southeastern region within months and set up its headquarters in Grand Bassa County while LURD had by then invaded sections of Monrovia. The Taylor government and militias were held within the confines of central Monrovia and the Paynesville area. Food was acutely scares and resident in the capitol were starving. The international community seeing the calamity called on Mr. Taylor to spare Liberia the bloodbath and step down. A meeting of Liberians was convened in Accra, Ghana to negotiate a settlement of the hostilities and usher in an interim government to lead Liberia to elections. On August 11, 2003 Charles Taylor departed Liberia for negotiated exile in Calabar, Federal Republic of Nigeria. Taylor’s Vice President, Moses Z. Blah took over for 11 days and was replaced by the National Transitional Government of Liberia (NTGL) headed by former Liberia Action Party (LAP) Chairman, Charles Gyude Bryant, assisted by former United Peoples’ Party (UPP), Chairman, Wesley Momoh Johnson. The NTGL was a creation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) signed in Accra, Ghana on August 18, 2003 by warring factions, Liberia’s political parties, and civil society groups attending the meeting. The CPA, amongst other things mandated, the NTGL to ensure the cessation of hostilities in Liberia with the help of the United Nations Mission n Liberia (UNMIL), set up several commissions to assist in the governance process including the national Elections Commission to conduct Presidential and Legislative elections in two years (the life span of the NTGL and the CPA). The NTGL was also mandated by the CPA to conduct the restructuring of Liberia’s security establishments including the Armed Forces of Liberia (AFL). Pursuant to the establishment and mandate of the NTGL, a seven member National Elections Commission (NEC) was appointed by Chairman Charles G. Bryant with recommendations from civil society groups. With the assistance of the international community, the NEC embarked on the review pof the electoral laws and line with the constitution of the Republic. Under the authority of the CPA, the NEC was empowered to embark on all reasonable suspensions of provisions of the constitution to allow for free and fair elections considering the span of the war and its toll on the lives of Liberians. Evolving out the NEC’s consultations with local stakeholders and her international partners was the Electoral Reform Law passed on December 17, 2004 which superseded the New electoral Law of 1986. The electoral reform law defined the parameters within which elections were to be held in Liberia in the face of the heavy displacement of people over the war years coupled with the constitutional inhibitions and the implication for free and participatory elections in a prevailing hostile social political environment. There was also the case of refugees and internally displaced people who, by virtue of there statuses would have been denied participation based simply on requirements which ran counter to the constitutional provisions. The CPA therefore smoothened the process and granted access to all Liberians(age 18 and above) within the confines of the Republic to register and participate in the electoral process. A key Issue which evolved during deliberations at the National Transitional Assembly (NTLA) for the passage for the electoral reform law was the that of Electoral Districts instead of the previously known electoral constituencies. According to international experts assisting the work of the NEC, Liberia had not had a census in more than 20years(since 1984) and as such, legal figures reflecting constituency make up(20,000 persons per constituency) was not realistic for the present period due to the massive displacement and death of people with in and over the borders of Liberia. Consequently, a decision was reached from broad consultations with stakeholders on the issue of electoral district (s) per county which was obtained by simply dividing the total number of registered voters (national) over the recorded figures in any particular county. . The intent of the formula was to necessarily tie down representation (in the House of Representatives) to people, as many of the counties were highly under populated especially in the southeast Counties. For the Senate race, the counties were considered a single constituency. Montserrado County emerged as the county with the most representation 14 seats, followed by Nimba County with 7 seats. (see annex for more detail).

The October 11, 2005 Presidential and Legislative Elections were held with 21 political parties, two alliances, a coalition along with an independent candidate contested Liberia's presidency. More than 700 persons also contested for both the 64-seat constitutional allocation for the House of Representatives and 30 seats for the House of Senate. During the first run of elections on October 11, 2005 all but one legislative seat was won. There was now outright winner in the presidential contest which required an absolute majority vote to win. The top two contenders, George Weah of the CDC congress for Democratic Change (CDC) with 28.3% of the total votes cast and Mrs. Ellen Johnson Sirleaf of the Unity Party (UP) acquired 19.8% of the total votes. In the run-off elections held on November 8, 2005, which required a simple majority to win, Mrs. Sirleaf acquired a total of 478,526 (59.4%) votes while George Weah's CDC obtained 327,046(40.6%) of the total votes cast out of a total valid votes cast of 805,572. On November 23, 2005 the NEC officially announced the results the both elections and held a certification program for all winners on December 19, 2005. The legislature held their leadership elections on January 13, 2006. For the President Pro-Tempore, Mr. Isaac Nyenabo of the NDPL won while for the Speaker of the House, Mr. Edwin M. Snowe also won. The body subsequently elected administrative staff including the Chief Clerk, Deputy Chief Clerk, Secretary and deputy Secretary of the Senate, and the Sergeant at-Arms. On January 16, 2006, the new government under the UP leadership was formally inducted into office.

Some Outlined Constitutional Powers & Functions of both Houses of the Legislature:

The national Legislature is the first of three branches Government. It comprises both houses both the House of representatives and the Senate. The Senate is considered the Upper House of the Legislature while the House of Representatives is the lower house. The Legislature makes all the Laws of Liberia. There are 64 Representatives and 30 Senators representing the 15 counties of Liberia. There are two Senators per county. The Legislature has, among many other powers, to:

Create all Laws

Create new counties
